Research Subject Guides
Research guides are librarian-created guides for the best places to go to research your subject. It's a great place to find out what databases are most useful!

This button opens a list of guides. Subject guides provide a collection of resources for that discipline. The librarian who created the guide is also an excellent resource.

This is what a subject guide looks like:

Communication Studies

Essential Resources

Communication Source
Our main Communications database. It's very easy to use, especially if you try the Subject Headings.

Some of the material here is indexed but not archived (that means it tells you about the article but doesn't give you the actual text of it), so make sure you're aware of how to find the full text or order it for free via interlibrary loan. (Don't let those scary library terms intimidate you: it's quick and easy!)

Film and Television Literature Index
This database looks and behaves the same as Communication Source, but searches a different set of content, related to film and television studies.
